

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. IN issuing a catalogue of my father's books it has been our aim, not merely to publish a descriptive list of the volumes contained in the library in order to facilitate their sale, but to make it somewhat of a memento of Mr. Bradlaugh himself. With that object we have added a facsimile of his autograph, and a reduced reproduction of one of the two very fine photographs of the study taken last May by Messrs. Dixon of Albany Street, N.W.

My father's books were very dear to him, and had always been so, from the time when as a dragoon he was able to carry the whole of his library in his soldier's knapsack, until the day of his death, when his literary possessions had outgrown all ordinary-sized rooms, and had even swelled beyond the capacity of his work-room at Circus Road. They numbered in all rather over 7,000 volumes, about 3,000 Blue Books, besides a very large number of unbound pamphlets.

In many respects the library is essentially a poor man's library. There are only a few rare bindings, and comparatively few costly "first editions"; now and again there is a volume missing from a set, and here and there a title page is wanting.<sup>1</sup> But, such as they are, he valued them, all and every one. Twice within recent years he thought he should be obliged to sell them to meet legal expenses—the first time it was to pay Government costs during his Parliamentary struggle, the second occasion was after the Peters and Kelly case. Each time the sale was happily averted, but the anticipation of the possibility brought extra lines to his face and bitterness to his heart. Last December, when he was feeling ill and in want of a rest and change, which he had no money to procure, I asked him: "Why not sell two or three of the more valuable books? If you could get health with the money they would fetch, it would be well worth the exchange." "Ah! my daughter," he answered with a sad half-smile, "when I have to part with my books ——." I was anxious about him, and ventured to press him further; but he only shook his head, saying: "It is of no use arguing the matter". In spite of—or was it because of?—his affection for his books, he was always willing to lend them to responsible people, but there was a slate kept hanging by the window at his side, upon which the borrower had to write the name of the book he was taking and the date upon which he proposed to return it.

Knowing then what his books were to my father, it will be readily understood how anxious I was, when at his death necessity compelled their sale, that they should be sold all together. For the most part their possession had cost him infinite pains and labor, and they were so dear to him that he valued them more than health itself: for them to be dispersed to utter strangers at an auction sale seemed an unendurable thought. I suppose Library Committees were afraid to buy this collection: probably they weakly feared possible controversial theology, or perhaps the even more dangerous books discussing vital social questions. Anyway, whatever the reason, not a single offer was made to me, although there was some vague talk of buying in two or three quarters.

Mr. Charles Herbert, who had already been very kind in making the necessary valuations, thereupon advised that a catalogue should be prepared and issued to the public, and that the books should be sold from the catalogue. By this means, instead of the books going to entire strangers, it would give those friends a chance to buy them who would value them not merely for themselves but for the sake of their previous possessor. I gladly fell in with this suggestion, and Mr. Herbert gave the necessary instructions as to how the catalogue should be prepared. Mrs. Mary Reed, Miss Ellen Colville, Miss Mabel Green, Miss Clara Angell, Mr. J. M. Robertson, Mr. Bonner and myself, at once set to work to describe the books according to Mr. Herbert's plan; and Mr. Herbert himself came down on an average three evenings a week for seven weeks to give us the benefit of his vast experience by valuing each separate book. To him and to all these friends I owe my most earnest and grateful thanks, for without such help as they gave me it would have been impossible for me to have got out this catalogue. Save one, they are all busy people, and all and each who came to help me came at considerable sacrifice to her or himself. It must please be understood that Mr. Herbert is responsible for the prices only; if any error of description should catch the experienced eye the fault must be put at my door for not correctly interpreting Mr. Herbert's ideas.

The catalogue is divided into parts, as it was thought desirable to separate the general subjects from the Law Books, Blue Books, etc., and reference to the page of "contents" will show where each section may be found. Each book is described, where possible, under its author's name. Every volume that contains my father's autograph signature has the contraction "Auto." added to its description; a few which formerly belonged to Mr. James Thomson ("B.V.")—who, it will be remembered, once lived in my father's house—and contain his autograph or notes, have this fact mentioned, as such books will thus have an additional interest to many people. My father did not very often make notes in his books, but occasionally there are some, and whether it is only one note or many, mention is made of any such writing in the description of the work. In a large number of books there are pencil marks against certain sentences or paragraphs. Of later years it was my father's habit to read in bed—almost the only leisure he had for reading—and he would mark in the margin of the book with a pencil any passages with which he specially agreed or disagreed. It has not been thought worth while to mention in the description such pencil marks as these, although doubtless there are many friends who will like to find these traces of him in the books they purchase: those who object to them can easily rub them out. A few of the volumes will be found uncut ; this happens where Mr. Bradlaugh had duplicate copies, and gave away the one he had been using, or where they came into the library shortly before his illness and death.

There is one book of my father's early MS., a description of which will be found on the last page of the catalogue ; upon this no price has been set, but I await offers.

1. The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify a market need. This involves conducting market research to determine what consumers want and what problems they are trying to solve.

2. Once a market need has been identified, the next step is to develop a concept for a product that meets that need. This involves brainstorming ideas and selecting the most promising one.

3. The third step is to create a prototype of the product. This allows the designer to test the product and make any necessary adjustments.

4. The fourth step is to conduct a feasibility study. This involves determining whether the product can be manufactured and sold at a profit.

5. The fifth step is to develop a business plan. This involves determining the costs of production and marketing, and the expected sales volume.

6. The sixth step is to secure financing. This involves finding investors or lenders who will provide the capital needed to develop and market the product.

7. The seventh step is to manufacture the product. This involves finding a manufacturer and negotiating the terms of production.

8. The eighth step is to market the product. This involves developing a marketing strategy and implementing it.

9. The ninth step is to distribute the product. This involves finding a distributor and negotiating the terms of distribution.

10. The tenth step is to evaluate the product. This involves determining whether the product is successful and whether it needs to be improved.

11. The eleventh step is to make any necessary adjustments. This involves making changes to the product or the marketing strategy based on the results of the evaluation.

12. The twelfth step is to continue to monitor the product. This involves keeping track of sales and customer feedback to ensure the product remains successful.

13. The thirteenth step is to plan for the future. This involves determining whether the product should be expanded into new markets or whether it should be discontinued.

14. The fourteenth step is to implement the plan. This involves making any necessary changes to the product or the marketing strategy.

15. The fifteenth step is to evaluate the results. This involves determining whether the plan was successful and whether it needs to be revised.
